ONTARIO LIBERALS SELECT NEW LEADER

Unity seems to have come to the Liberal party in Ontario with the selection of Mr. Harry C. Nixon as leader of the party in that province.

The ribald and somewhat comic capers of the former premier Mitchell Hepburn, were a constant source of irritation to the more staid and steady members of the party and even reached into the recesses of the inner circles of the dominion government. At that the former premier had a lot of back-ers and still has for all we know, and he may pop up with a large following even yet. He has announced that he is supporting John Bracken, leader of the Progressive-Conservative party at the next general election. It is no secret that "Mitch" has been a firebrand in Ontario politics and there is no assurance that he has been subdued to any extent.

The new leader of the Ontario Liberal party is a different type of man. He is very popular, we hear, among the farmers of the province, and is equally respected among the town and city folk for his ability as an administrator and his progressive attitude. A provincial general election is no doubt in the offing and Ontario Liberals feel they have chosen a man who will lead them again to victory. It has been said that "As Ontario goes, so goes the dominion." The Ontario election will be followed with keen interest.

The regular meeting of the Irma Ladies Aid will be held at the home of Mrs. W. N. Frickleton on May 13. The devotionals will be taken by Mrs. J. Fenton, the inspirational paper by Mrs. E. Carter, and assisting the hostess are Mrs. McLeod and Mrs. Blakley. Friends and neighbors are always welcome.

For years Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen and Judy Richards (above) have been making trans-Canada tours and receiving the nation's handsomest bouquets, but today their journey is a special matter for Canada's young men of the armed forces, since Mart and the lads are visiting training centres and playing their sweetest arrangements for the troops. Mart and the boys and Judy are expected in the west shortly.

Peace Garden

W.C.T.U. NOTES

Again interest in the matter of the International Peace Garden dawned on the horizon and we bespeak for it the benign co-operation that it surely deserves and that we feel positive our people will grant.

The man who conceived the idea of thus giving expression to this beautiful plan typifying national desires for peace deserves to go on record with most appreciative world remembrance.

Today we are being given opportunity to broadcast in a fresh way this conception of a lasting testimonial to "the hunger and thirst of the heart" for peace; peace at home and abroad.

The Alberta board of education has prepared and sent to the schools of Alberta a copy of a two-act drama to be used for Goodwill Day, in which reference is made to the Peace Garden, along with the Atlantic Charter and other items. The department has given our W.C.T.U. concession to insert a paragraph to say that a representative of the Peace Garden would be at the school on the day of the program given to take memberships at 10c each. The pupils or anyone buying a membership card will become members of the International Peace Garden Inc., and a permanent record of names kept by the Peace Garden Board and Library.

You will remember the lovely Peace Garden Cards—goodwill cards—that we were selling a few months ago, illustrating the stone tablets which was the first building erected on these grounds. Over it waved the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes; on its face the pledge taken by 50,000 Canadians and Americans on that summer day in 1922 when the opening ceremonies took place. The pledge reads: "We God in His Glory, we two nations dedicate this Garden and pledge ourselves that as long as men shall live we will not take up arms against one another."

This witnessed international recognition of the fact that Great Britain, United States and Canada had maintained mutual peace for more than a century.

Henry J. Moore, long associated with the famous Kew Gardens of London, came to this continent about 15 years ago, lecturing for a few years in colleges of both countries. The thought of a garden to represent peace between the two nations appealed to him. He suggested it to conventions "on both sides of the line."

These bodies presented the same to their respective governments, both of which made grants of land for the purpose. Mr. Moore, flying by plane along the international line to select a spot found nothing more appealing than an area in the Turtle Mountains, lying in North Dakota and Manitoba. Here the natural scenic beauties greatly augmented by semi-artificial lakes, winding paths, boulevards, over-night cabins, etc., keep a sanctuary for wild animals and form an inspiring spot to visit.

Many women's organizations and groups of school children in both lands have contributed to its development and its upkeep and formed a link in an ever widening circle of "Love-thy-neighbor-as thyself."

Now membership cards are being offered in the schools of Alberta commemorative of this event—not only that, insuring each child who buys one a membership in the Peace Garden. What a grand thought that children shall own shares in a great concern aiming to help sweep wars from the face of "this good earth."

These cards will cost ten cents apiece and names of all who buy will be recorded in the Peace Garden library.

For a child to own a share in a garden planned to increase sentiments of peace between nations, scarcely can there be a way it more effectively develop principles that will have the practical and spiritual effects of maintaining consideration, concession, justice.

Nancy O. Parke.

To any teacher who will give me the number of pupils and date of program, I will undertake to supply cards.

MEAT CHARTS WILL OUTLINE COUPON VALUE OF EACH CUT

Deciding what kind of meat to spend ration coupons on won't be a complicated problem for Canadian housewives. Comprehensive charts are now being prepared by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which will be on display in every meat store when rationing begins. The charts will show exactly how much of every type of meat and every kind of cut can be had for ration coupons. They'll be the official guide for both butcher and customer. Rationed meats are beef, veal, pork and mutton. "Fancy" meats, such as kidney, liver and brain, will not be rationed. Fish and poultry will not be rationed, nor will cuts of meat containing more than 50 per cent bone.

Preparing the charts now are men with long years of experience in the butchering trade, who have the benefit of experts in every field to assist them. It is no mean task. The charts must include all the information necessary for buying all the different cuts of meat. Although the weekly ration of meat is to be about two pounds per person, the coupon value of different cuts has still to be announced.

The ration charts to be displayed in all stores selling meat, will divide beef, pork, mutton and lamb into their various cuts, and into their weight classes, to compare with the value of the coupons, so that the housewife may tell at a glance just how much.

It may look out of place to ask what is being done in this province and in the different centres, both urban and rural, to see that a sufficient supply of coal and wood is available for next winter. The dominion government warned last month that a shortage of fuel is bound to occur next winter unless the coal bins are filled this summer, and supplies of wood are made available.

World of Wheat

Treating Seed Grain

Farmers I suggest should be very careful this year in the treatment of certain seed grain, particularly flax and oats. From all that one can find out wheat and barley seem to be germinating well this year, and to have strong vitality. It might, therefore, be quite proper, if desired, to treat wheat and barley this year with formaldehyde, but if this is done the farmer must be absolutely certain that the solution is no stronger than recommended by the manufacturer as stated in the directions on the package, for a very little extra strength in the solution will lower germination.

Flax and oats, however, I suggest, should be treated this year only with mercurial dust—Cereon or Leytosan—(because some of these crops were touched with early fall frost which weakened vitality). These mercurial dusts do not harm germination; on the contrary they actually improve germination. Again, however, the proper amount for the various grains, as marked by the manufacturer on the package, should be used.

I have seen wheat and oats improved 15 per cent in germination by the use of mercurial dust. Mercurial dusts have the advantage that the grain can be treated and stored a week or so before seeding without any harm to the seed.

"The Aldrich Family" celebrated its fifth anniversary on April 13, for it was on that date that the "family" was born in Clifford Goldsmith's Broadway comedy "What a Life."

Since that time Henry Aldrich has become America's favorite adolescent, awaited each Thursday by millions of American families and their Canadian neighbors.

Although "The Aldrich Family" has made radio history right from the start, none of the original cast remain. At present Henry is played by Norman Tokar; Homer Brown by Jackie Kelk; Sam Aldrich by House Jameson; Mrs. Aldrich by Katharine Raht and Henry's sister Mary by Mary Rolfe.

When the fifth anniversary celebration loomed up the four girls who have played Mary since the Goldsmith comedy started on the air, got together with the author to blow out candles on the anniversary cake. Pretty Ann Lincoln is now playing the ingenue lead in "Life with Father," on Broadway; Mary Shipley is Henry's girl friend, Kathleen, in almost every "Aldrich" episode; Charita Bauer has played leading and featured roles in two Broadway plays in the interim, as well as the title part in the CBS "Maudie's Diary" series. As for Mary Rolfe, she is the present sister Mary who bears up under Henry's enthusiasm very well, thank you.

All you folks who are lovers of the old time music and the old Barn Dance will be on hand each Saturday night at 9 p.m. to listen to the music and fun at the Red River Barn Dance. Tom Gardiner's music provides the impetus for the dancers, and the fun and hilarity of the rest of the cast, plus the prizes of Hudson's Bay Blankets given away each week, make this a program that you won't want to miss. Be on hand this Saturday at 9 to hear the "Red River Barn Dance" over station CJCA. The place on your dial—930 kcs.

RCAF NEWS NOTES

High school boys who plan to take up aircrew duties with the RCAF at the completion of the present school year may be enlisted now and return to their schools until after examinations are over. This privilege for students only will permit them to enter the service without delay as soon as school finishes. Enlist now—report later. Those students who are interested should write at once to No. 3 Recruiting Centre, RCAF, Edmonton, for the necessary documents. Transportation will be supplied to well qualified students to enable them to report to the recruiting centre without any expense to themselves.

During March a group of RCAF Women's Division was assigned to the new RCAF bomber group which was organized in Britain in January, 1943. They are serving as clerks, stenographers, transport drivers, cooks and mess women.

The RCAF has set a quota of 20,000 enlistments for women during 1943. Why not wear air force blue with your sisters in the service? "They serve that men may fly."

DON'T FEED THE MOTHS

Now is the time to plan action against these fifth columnists. With the present urgent need of conserving materials, it is your duty to take steps to prevent damage. Furs, woollens, and materials with wool fibres, hair fabrics and feathers are all attacked by the moth.

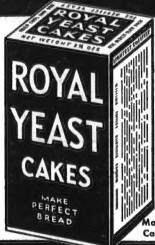

According to Miss Richards of the department of agriculture, extension branch, the secret in battling these culprits is prevention. Moths are attracted to soiled spots even if the soil is on a non-animal fabric like cotton and rayon. The first step before storing away is to wash the article or send the garment to the dry cleaners. Then place in boxes, trunks or brown paper bundles, made as moth-tight and gas-tight as possible by sealing any cracks with tape or gummed paper. Wrapping in newspaper helps too. Scatter about 1 lb. of fresh naphthalene flakes or paradichlorobenzene crystals in each large trunk full of clothes and close the lid tightly. If using garment bags or moth bags suspend a few ounces in cheese cloth in the upper part of the bag. The gas formed is heavier than air and falls. This method may also be used for piano felting. The larvae of clothes moths and carpet beetles may develop in out of the way places where lint and dust collect in furnace shafts, floor cracks, behind sideboards, in mending baskets, discarded clothes and upholstered furniture. Periodic house-cleaning, airing and brushing in the sun, or freezing in the winter will prevent much damage. If moths have already got a head start in furniture, it is advisable to have the infested pieces well fumigated.

Much is heard of the so-called moth proofing substances. Some have definite value, but none gives complete and permanent protection. For home use a fairly simple and effective preparation may be made by dissolving 2 oz. of sodium fluoride in one gallon hot water or use a saturated solution of sodium fluoride. These are poisons so handle accordingly. They are safe to use on anything water will not damage. Apply when cool with a sponge or sprayer on rugs, furniture coverings, coats, in lining of ski boots and skates, etc. or in case of small garments such as woollen mitts, dip them in the solution. When dry brush off the slight "bloom" that may appear on the surface.

For further information write to the Women's Branch, Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Permits Available

Giving Extra Sugar Tea And Coffee For Prisoner Of War Parcels
For some time now special permits have been available for Canadians sending sugar, tea and coffee, in personal parcels to next-of-kin who are prisoners of war. This is good news because it means that purchases of these goods do not cut into their own rations.

A form known as "Prisoners of War Purchase Permit" is being sent to all next-of-kin by the Department of National War Services. This form is made out in duplicate, one copy to be sent to the Ration Administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Montreal, the other to be left with the merchant from whom the rationed commodity is purchased.

Postal Censors check each parcel to prisoners to make certain that articles purchased are sent along to the boys in the prison camps.

Quantities which may be sent in any personal parcel to a prisoner of war includes up to one pound of coffee, and a quarter of a pound of tea, and two pounds of sugar which may be made into hard candy.

"Charles!" She was breathless. "It's too beautiful. No, really you spoil me." She fingered the great pendant stone. "Will you put it on for me?"

He hesitated. Then his fingers just lightly trailed her skin as he clasped it together. She was trembling. Maybe now in this moment he would take her in his arms, unloose the floodgates of his heart.

Finally he stood away and looked at her. "Do you know, you're a very beautiful woman." She didn't reply. "Margaret," he asked, "are you happy?"

"Why do you ask?" The moment was gone.

"I don't know. I wondered. Often, I've seen a look in your eyes as if you were thinking of someone." He added gently, "Isn't there something morbid in burning one's heart with the dead?"

There was a tinge of bitterness in her reply. "That's a strange thing for you to say." She went on with suppressed intensity. "Charles, I know you feel there really is someone and that some day you may find her. But doesn't it frighten you sometimes to know that the years are passing and that you may lose the capacity for happiness? You may have come so near her—perhaps on the street. You may even have met her, Charles, and not known her. It might even be someone you know." She touched his arm. "Charles, it might even be me."

He drew back. It was as if she had described something dear and beloved. "Margaret," he said in kindly protest.

Her mouth twisted. She began talking wildly. "Charles, I'd like a change, a rest. I'd like to travel—maybe to Paris. I've been a strain I suppose. I'm just a little nobody you know. It's harder than I thought to be the wife of Charles Rainier."

He was gazing at her in vague uneasiness. "You are over tired I think. Shall we talk about it in the morning?"

"In the morning," she said tonelessly. "Yes, Charles. Goodnight."

Her door closed behind her. Her voice rose in a despairing whisper. "Smithy. Oh Smithy..."

Paula's trip to South America was planned and set for the next afternoon. Several days later she was ready to leave. Smithy, along with his assistant Harrison, took her to the train.

She stood at the door of her railway carriage and he said stiffly, "Is this place where you're staying in the country—on your way?"

"Not quite." The little vine covered cottage where she and Smithy had lived would house her once more and she would bid it a final adieu. "No, it's in Wickham, a quiet little village with a delightful old inn. I want to go there again. I was happy there once."

The train was ready to start. Harrison put the last piece of luggage in the vestibule. Now the train was moving slowly. Smithy walked alongside. "I wish you weren't leaving. It—it will seem strange not to talk things over with you—" He kissed her cheek. "You'll let me hear from you?"

"Of course. Goodbye Charles. Goodbye..."

Her voice came back faintly once more. Then she was gone. He stood there troubled and a bit frightened. He heard Harrison speaking to him. "We'd better start for the Melbridge Cable Works, sir. The telegram was urgent."

They picked up some papers at the office and immediately boarded the train. Once in Melbridge, the business at the Cable Works was straightened out. The men had been planning to strike unless their demands were met. However, Sir Charles Rainier settled the matter within minutes, not only by raising wages but shortening hours and bettering working conditions in general.

He was smiling vaguely as he left the place with Harrison. In the back of him, the cheers of the men still resounded. By the time they reached the village it was evening. There was still an air of train departure. They would see a bit of Melbridge. He and Harrison made for a small bar, emerging into the fog a bit later. Harrison discovered that they were out of cigarettes.

"Smithy nodded briefly. 'Well never had there's a little tobacco shop just around the corner.' Harrison glanced at him in surprise.

They bought their cigarettes but as they came outside Harrison said, "I thought you told me you'd never been in Melbridge."

"I haven't," Smithy returned indifferently. Then, all at once, he paled. Strange. He had said, "There's a little tobacco shop just around the corner." The shop was off the main street. He couldn't have seen it on his way from the station. "Harrison... I don't understand it. I could hear bells and whistles too. A sweet break out on his forehead. He put a shaking hand to a railing.

"Harrison, let me think. That little shop—and there's a big place here on a hill. There were wide gates and a high wall all around it."

Harrison was alarmed. "Sir, if you're ill..."

"No, no, Harrison. I've got to trace it." He put his hands over his eyes. There were things, shapes at the back of his mind. "I was trying to get away from Melbridge... trying to escape. And there was a girl..." He started forward in excitement. "I—I loved her. We were married..." He seemed dazed. "Harrison, leave me now. I'm going up there on the hill to that building. There's something I want to know... must know."

Harrison stood there and watched him hurry off. Harrison was a good fellow and now he was terribly troubled. Poor Lady Rainier. What a blow this would be to her. She had said she would be at Wickham. He must seek her out... warn her.

It was early the next morning that he found her in the little vine covered cottage. She had been sitting at the piano softly fingering a melody, her eyes on the white mists of the hills. "Lady Rainier!" He rushed to her and warmly took her hands. "Oh, I'm so glad I've found you."

Paula said softly, "Then he is here. What has happened?"

Harrison spoke almost wildly. "I think the world of him Lady Rainier, you know that but he doesn't realize what he's doing. He's been coming past the happenings after their visit to the tobaccoist's. And—it seems there was a woman and he married her. He says he must know her. It's all he seems to care about. It's got to be stopped. It could ruin him and it would be dreadful for you." He looked at her and burst out, "I must say, you take it very calmly. When I try to imagine how you must feel..."

Her voice was tender. "I don't feel anything yet—at least not much. But I keep on thinking of what you said, that he doesn't care."

Harrison was miserable. "I know. It's awful. I'm dreadfully sorry." All at once, she flung out her arms. "Oh no Harrison, it's wonderful. He'd throw over everything, his future, his ambitions, everything if he could find her." She turned and looked out of the window. "And Harrison, there he is. You see The big willow tree the corner. He's coming past the church walking through that little rambling garden."

Yes, it was Smithy, moving very slowly along the road. Paula could almost feel his heart beating. Now he had opened the gate. It created a little. He was coming up the path. With his hand he touched the knob of the door.

It opened and she stood there. "Smithy," she said, ever so softly. He faced her. "Paula..."

Reason There Are Fewer Women Now In Russian Army

Although recent communiques have singled out women snipers and women combat pilots in the Red Army, mentioning their fighting feats, it is difficult now for women to get combat duty in the Soviet forces.

During the first year of the war there were more women in the ranks than now. At that time, only physical fitness and a statement of voluntary service were sufficient to let them fight.

Now Red Army commanders are reluctant to accept them—although individuals manage to make their way to the front ranks.

Russia has no special branches for women, similar to the Auxiliaries in other countries.

Most women serving with the army are in the medical corps, not only in base hospitals but at front line evacuation points and even accompanying fighting squads on the battle front.

Our government needs $1,100,000,000 from you and we're right now. Not gifts, not taxes, not charity—just a loan. The finest loan that you can make no matter where your money is invested now.

So buy all the Victory Bonds you possibly can.

Today your money will buy tanks, planes, guns, supplies and ammunition for our boys; tomorrow it will buy a car, a home or tractor for you and your family.

Think it over, then obey that impulse.

STRIKES ARE MATTER OF DEEP CONCERN

The public as well as governments are viewing with alarm the number of strikes that are looming up not only in Canada but in the United States as well. Alberta is not even immune to strikes and rumors of strikes at the present moment. Just what it is all about is hard to say from the quiet of a country newspaper office, but it seems to us that if labor has any grievances they could be ironed out without a walk out or a sitdown strike. Just when the United Nations are preparing for an all-out attack it must be discouraging news to the military leaders and the rank and file of the armed forces on land and sea and air. The president of the United States made a stirring appeal to the 500,000 coal miners in that country on strike to go back to work as their action was retarding the war effort and jeopardizing the safety of the nation. No doubt there are two sides to the trouble but why in times like these should strikes have to be resorted to? There must be some way to stop strikes and disputes before they start.

VICTORY BONDS

Dr. Wheeler says:

"If Canadians were asked to give money to help to win the war we would not be asked to make a big sacrifice. Some are giving their lives. We are asked to lend money. I am sure that farmers throughout Canada will be glad to lend money to their country, for like all other Canadians, they know we must do all we can to help."

"There is a practical reason for buying Victory Bonds, too. The money we lend to Canada now, to help to win the war, will be ours to use as we please after the war has been won. Ready cash will be handy to have when we will want to replace farm equipment that is wearing out now. A farmer can always find a use for savings, and there is no better way to save than by investing all we can in Victory Bonds."

Born in England, the "Wheat Wizard of Saskatchewan" spent his early years as a clerk in the Old Country. In 1888 he emigrated to Canada, and homesteaded north of Saskatoon where he learned the elements of farming. In 1900 he was attracted to the Rosthern district where he purchased, for less than one thousand dollars, the 160 acre farm on which the celebrated experiments which made his name a household word in Western Canada were carried out.

One of his initial achievements was producing 40 bushels of wheat to the acre on three inches of rainfall.

In 1911 he scored one of his greatest successes when, with a bushel of Marquis wheat, he won the "world's championship" at the New York land show, and was awarded the prize of $1,000 offered by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. In 1914 and 1915 he won similar honors, and earned for himself the appellation—"The World's Champion Wheat Grower."

For his services to Canadian agriculture, Seager Wheeler was honored in 1918 by a doctor of laws degree conferred by Queen's University.

WHAT A VICTORY BOND IS:

A Victory Bond is the promise of the Dominion of Canada to repay in cash the full face value of the Bond at the time stipulated, with half-yearly interest at the rate of 3% per annum until maturity. A Victory Bond is the safest investment in Canada. The entire resources of the Dominion stand behind it. Canada has been issuing Bonds for 75 years, and has never failed to pay every dollar of principal and interest. A Victory Bond is at least more readily converted into cash than any other security.
